

The Right Man in the Right Place

We each live in context created by ourselves or by others. Man's evolution from player in contexts designed by others to designer of contexts in which his kind develop gives prove of the qualitative leap we can make if we respond to economical, political, social, cultural stimuli and if we permanently asses the phases of our evolution.

Wish is not enough in order to achieve existential objectives, but it is also extremely important to correctly asses the potential we have and the competencies we can use at a particular moment. An essential rapport exists between the consistency of the tasks undertaken by an individual on an organizational level and the quality of the role he undertakes upon organizational groups level.

To be „the right man in the right place“ means to assume both successes and failures, by deciding whenever necessary upon a change in the career path. The openness in undertaking risk, the power of making sacrifices, the courage of being generous, the patience in finalizing things can lead to every individual's finding his existential path. Quality shows beyond words and it represents an attitude, as well as a result of efforts paid throughout years.

Paul Marinescu
